MAURETANIA SLOWS DOWN WHEN WARNED LIKE TITANIC OF ICEBERG IN HER PATH

Gunarder's Speed Reduced to Ten Knots an Hour in Perilous Zone.

ADRIATIC SENDS WORD.

White Star Liner Also Reduces
Speed While Putting Wireless at Work.

The Mauretania of the Cunard line arrived here to-day after having passed through the ice lane travelled by the Titanic and having had a similar experience of being warned to look out for a dangerous berg.

Unlike in the case of the White Star liner on her maiden voyage the fleet Mauretania slowed down to less than ten knots an hour and ploughed along at that slow-for the Mauretania—speed until all danger was passed.

The Cunarder got the wireless tip to "warn iceberg" from the Adriatic of the White Star line. At 11:30 o'clock last Tuesday morning the Adriatic sighted a berg 50 feet high and 100 feet long almost directly in the liner's course.

The weather was clear and warm and the iceberg was visible miles away. The Adriatic slowed down and ran past the island of ice, taking observations of its exact position. The passengers flocked to the rails and watched the great berg.

ADRIATIC NEAR PLACE WHERE TITANIC SANK.

When they learned from the ship's officers that they were almost in the position where the Titanic sank there was considerable excitement on board. Many attempts were made to photograph the iceberg, but the sunlight was too brilliant and the berg was too far away.

The Adriatic was in wireless touch with the Mauretania, which was racing behind the White Star boat at twenty-five knots an hour. Capt. Hayes of the Adriatic warned the skipper of the Mauretania that the berg was a dangerous one and that he had better keep a sharp lookout for her when he came along that night.

The Mauretania did not reach the ice zone until 11:30 o'clock at night. Conditions were practically the same as in the case of the Titanic disaster. There was a sharp drop in the temperature as the Cunarder approached the location given in the wireless warning.

Immediately the great Cunarder was slowed down to half speed and then to ten knots an hour for the Mauretania, or almost crawling for a vessel that can hurtle through the waves at the speed of an express train.

It was a clear but dark starlight night and the lookouts failed to catch sight of the iceberg passed by the Adriatic. It was estimated that the Mauretania passed within five miles of the ice. None of the passengers aboard the Mauretania knew anything about passing the iceberg.

PRIEST ACCUSED BY GIRL PUT UNDER $1,000 BOND.

Found Guilty of Annoying Katherine Kavanaugh, Rev. John Devaney Will Appeal Case.

The Rev. John Patrick Devaney of Jackson, Neb., who was found guilty in the West Side Court yesterday of annoying the street and annoying twelve-year-old Katherine Kavanaugh of No. 645 Tenth avenue, was held by Magistrate Butler to-day in $1,000 bond for good behavior during the next six months.

When the priest appeared in court his attorney, John Fitzgerald, protested against the finding of the magistrate, saying the priest had been a victim of circumstances and that the Court had been misled as to the circumstances attending the priest's misconduct. Fitzgerald gave notice of an appeal upon the conviction in the magistrate's court.

A woman, whose name was withheld, furnished the bond.

SWALLOWS TOOTH, SUES DENTIST FOR $10,300 DAMAGES

Williams Toted Molar in His Throat for Two Months,
He Alleges.

All because of a tooth, Jewel Williams, a young electrician employed by the Great Western Power Company of No. 35 Broad street, brought suit in the Supreme Court to-day against Dr. Elias J. Friedlander, proprietor of the Harvard Dental Parlor, No. 530 Willis avenue, for $10,300 damages.

The troublesome tooth, according to the complaint filed to-day by Attorney N. J. O'Connell of No. 201 Broadway, who is appearing for Williams, was yanked free from its setting in Williams' jaw July 20, 1909, while the young man was under an anesthetic administered by Dr. Friedlander.

But the complaint states, the dentist was careless in letting go of the tooth before he had it out of Williams' mouth, and the tooth slipped down and lodged in Williams' throat. When Williams came out of the anesthetic, the complaint states, the dentist failed to inform the young electrician what had happened to the tooth. Williams immediately sought with a bit of coughing, the complaint says, and his health began to fail from that moment.

This condition, according to the complaint, continued for more than two months, during which time Williams failed so much that he became "skin and bones." The complaint further states Williams went from one doctor to another and from hospital to hospital without finding any relief. His business, in addition to his health, suffered, the complaint asserts.

Finally Williams was seized with a severe fit of coughing and forth came the tooth from the young man's throat. Instant relief was the result, the complaint states, and the health of Williams has continued to improve ever since. The source of all his malady, the tooth, Williams says, revealed to him the fact that Dr. Friedlander had failed to inform him of the mysterious cause for his failing health.

OVERHAULS MOTT AT HONGKONG IN OVERSEA CHASE

Fuller, Baffled at Many Points in Pursuit of New Yorker and Actress, Finally Wins.

MAY NOT CHANGE PLANS

Young Millionaire Declares He Intends to Settle Down in Japan.

HONGKONG, July 18.—Hector Fuller, ex-war correspondent, who has for weeks been trailing Jordan Lawrence Mott Jr., heir to the millions left by his grandfather, founder of the Mott Ironworks of New York, overtook the latter here to-day.

Fuller was engaged at a high salary as a kind of guardian for Mott, but the latter gave him the slip some time ago and shipped from New York as purser on the tramp steamship Indradeo, bound for China, May 18. On the same boat there sailed, booked as stewardess to evade the anti-passenger carrying law, an actress to whom it was believed Mott was attached.

NOT CERTAIN WHAT CAN BE DONE NOW.

The former war correspondent gave chase, and arrived at successive ports in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean only a few hours behind his quarry. It is uncertain, however, what he can do with his man now that he has caught him. Mott says he is going to settle in Japan.

That John Lawrence Mott, 2d, son of Lawrence Mott of the Mott Iron Works, defeated the plan of his parents to send him around the world in a sailing vessel under the care of Fuller, war correspondent and soldier of fortune, was first known on May 22, when it was admitted he had sailed the Saturday before on the British freighter Indradeo, bound for Hongkong, China, by way of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal. He signed on the ship under the name of "J. Martin."

On the ship also was Frances Hewitt, an actress, wife of Walter Bowne of Flushing, N. Y. She passed as "Mrs. Martin."

FULLER UNDAUNTED BY MANY FAILURES.

The Mott family started in quick pursuit. Mr. and Mrs. Mott sailing immediately on the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm. Fuller caught the Mauretania a few hours later, hoping to intercept the young millionaire at Gibraltar.

Mott was equipped to keep ahead in chase with $200 in cash and a letter of credit for $10,000.

Mott and Mrs. Bowne arrived at Gibraltar on May 31. Standing on the Indradeo's freight stowed deck, her face tanned by the sun at sea, that day Mrs. Bowne, standing beside the young millionaire told the correspondents that she loved J. Lawrence Mott and would not be affected by the loss of his millions.

The most striking of her utterances was: "I am no vampire. My influence over him has been all for good. I do not wish to marry or estrange a rich man's son. We intend to go to Japan, and there we will make a new start. I shall make a new man of Lawrence."

Mott was concerned as to the steps his parents were taking to capture him. Fuller was at this time headed for the Gibraltar port.

But circumstances favored the poet and not the war correspondent. Fuller brought no gloom to Gibraltar. He was held up by a strike on the southern Spanish railways and Mott was happy when he learned Fuller could not reach Gibraltar that night.

But Fuller kept to the trail and followed the Indradeo through the Mediterranean, reaching Port Said just three hours too late. Undaunted, he kept up the chase and left for Hong Kong on a faster steamer than the Indradeo, which he was sure would land him ahead of Mott, which it did.

TURKS' GUNS SINK ITALIAN WARSHIPS IN DARDANELLES

Two Sent to the Bottom With
All on Board and Six Others
Are Badly Damaged.

ATTACK MADE IN NIGHT.

Raked by Shells From Forts, Italian Vessels Turn and Race to Open Sea.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 18.—Eight Italian torpedo boats attacked the entrance to the Dardanelles at 1:30 A. M. to-day. The Turkish forts replied vigorously, sinking two of the Italian war vessels with all on board and damaging the other six. The cannonade lasted forty-five minutes.

The Italians' surprise attack was attempted under cover of darkness, when it was supposed the Turks would be caught off their guard. The torpedo vessels had not steamed far, however, up the strait before they were raked by a searchlight directed from one of the forts, and a furious cannonade immediately began.

Murderously raked from both the European and Asiatic shores, the flotilla quickly turned tail and fled at full speed back toward the Aegean Sea. DARDANELLES AGAIN CLOSED BECAUSE OF ATTACK.

Few details of the engagement are known but in addition to the report that two of the boats were sent to the bottom with all on board the other six are said to have been badly damaged by the hailstorm of Turkish shells.

The run through the Dardanelles is one of about forty miles, between coasts from one end to the other, four miles apart. Had the Italian flotilla effected it, it would have had the obsolete Turkish warships in the Sea of Marmara at its mercy and a bombardment of Constantinople at the eastern end of the Marmara Sea would certainly have followed.

As a result of the attack the Turkish Government notified the powers to-day that the Dardanelles have again been closed to the shipping of the world. This action followed a hurriedly called meeting of the Cabinet ministers at the Palace, where a council of war was held.

ROME DOUBTS NEWS OF AT-TACK ON DARDANELLES.

ROME, July 19.—The Italian Government, according to a semi-official note issued to-day, knows nothing of the reported action between a flotilla of Italian torpedo-boat destroyers and the Turkish forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles except that several Turkish torpedo boats left the straits to hunt for Italian warships and that it is possible, therefore, the Italian destroyers engaged these vessels in battle.

"The idea that the Italian destroyers would try to force the Dardanelles," the semi-official note says, "is ridiculous. If the Turkish forts bombarded the Italian warships it was probably a result of the panic now reigning in Turkey or was a pretext of the Government again to close the straits."

Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish Minister in London, definitely accepted the post of Grand Visier to-day. He will begin the formation of his Cabinet at once. The Sultan gave him an entirely free hand. Tewfik assumed office with his country at war against Italy. Albania in rebellion, nearly the whole army mutinous, the people on the verge of revolt against the Government and an empty treasury.

"DR." KUKAY MUST SPEND THREE MONTHS IN PRISON.

Unlicensed Head of So-Called Dental College, Convicted Second Time, Is Also Fined.

"Dr." Jose M. Gonzalez Kukay, who conducted a dental college at No. 232 Third avenue, charging students $50 for instruction, was sentenced to the penitentiary for three months to-day by Justice Parker, O'Brien and Deuel of the Court of Special Sessions. A fine of $50 in addition was imposed on Kukay. Dental Society agents testified against Kukay. Two women agents told the Justices they had had Kukay treat their teeth and when they asked him if he was a licensed practitioner he admitted he was not. Kukay was convicted once before on the same charge and fined $50.

FLAMES ROUT OUT FIFTY MEMBERS OF CRESCENT CLUB EXECUTOR SAYS COFFEY DIED IN DEBT $450,827

Startled Clubmen and Guests
Form Hose Brigade to Save Country House.

While fifty members and overnight guests of the Crescent Athletic Club, Eighty-fourth street and Shore road, Bay Ridge, were sleeping at 1:30 o'clock this morning, Guido Parlati, watchman, on duty for his second night, smelled smoke.

The watchman ran from floor to floor, the smoke smell growing stronger as he descended. As he reached a former billiard room in the basement, now used as a cloak room, a sheet of flame shot out from a cabinet located at the south end of the building, beneath the porch and dining room.

Parlati dashed past the flame and regained the main floor, where he jerked the five fire bells, turned in the alarm and then began running through the halls, shouting to awaken guests and members.

Men, incompletely clothed, filled the halls. Some paused to grab a coat or hat, others were in their night apparel. Among the first to appear and seize axes and help Parlati unroll the fire hose was C. M. Bull Jr., a broker, and former vice-president of the club. Treasurer Harry Martin, another broker, wielded another axe, and House Committee member A. D. Byrne, George Stebbins, George Hinchman and former Deputy Police Commissioner A. W. Boersma formed the emergency hose brigade.

The first alarm brought Engines Nos. 14 and 16 and Hook and Ladder Company 12. At Fire Headquarters the inspector showed that the blaze was at the Crescent Athletic Club, and Chief Lally hurried to the scene in his automobile, sending in a second alarm, which brought a fire-boat and another engine and hook and ladder company. The fire burned through the basement ceiling, destroyed part of the south porch and did considerable damage in the dining room before being extinguished. Chief Lally ascribes it to spontaneous combustion in the soft coal bin.

Gunfighters Frankly Tell Who Contributed, and Who Divided the Money After Killing.

The following narrative of the deed and the death of Herman Rosenthal comes from a man who has lived in the night life of the White Light District all his life. He is not a gambler or a bartender or a night-hawk, but a responsible citizen with an established business, even though there are months together when he never sees the light of the sun when he is on the streets.

"I was walking towards the Metropole with my wife, at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. There was excitement up there. 'Bridgie' Webber, whom I have known for years, passed me, running away; he was going like a cat with dogs after him. He looked scared.

"I went on to the Metropole. I heard Herman Rosenthal had been killed. I saw his body. It was the body of Rosenthal. I asked what Webber was running away for? What he had to do with it? They told me Webber had been talking to Herman Rosenthal just before he was shot and
